$1.4 Million in Season To Share Grants Distributed to 55 Metro Denver Nonprofit Organizations

Denver, CO, March 27, 2020 - Through The Denver Post Season To Share campaign presented by Denver Active 20-30 Children's Foundation, $1,400,000 in grants has been distributed to 55 local nonprofit agencies providing life-changing programs that help low-income families and individuals move out of poverty toward stabilization and self-sufficiency.

Thanks to 3,900 donors and a generous Denver Active 20-30 matching grant, the 2019/20 Season To Share campaign will make a significant impact on thousands of children, families and individuals through programs focusing on the areas of children and youth, health and wellness, homelessness and hunger. These grants will strengthen metro Denver by preparing children and youth for success in the classroom and in life, protecting children and families in need with medical care, housing families and individuals in need of a permanent home, and helping to nourish those who experience hunger.

"Denver Active 20-30 Children's Foundation is pleased to partner with The Denver Post Community Foundation in providing critical support for these leading Colorado nonprofits," said Cameron Richards, president of Denver Active 20-30. "These funds, and the services that they support, are being delivered at an exceptionally critical time and the need has never been higher. Thank you to all in our community who are helping others through uncertain times."

"We find it fitting that at the time we are publicly announcing our Season To Share grantees, their dedicated staff and volunteers are working harder than ever to help those in our community who need it the most," said Tracy Ulmer, president of The Denver Post Community Foundation. "We are so grateful to all our generous donors and to Denver Active 20-30 for their partnership in making these grants possible for the 55 well-deserving agencies, especially at a time when their efforts and resources are more crucial than ever."
